I just want to tell you about the incredible change in my life in last few years. I am now very lucky to be working in the field I like, love and get inspired by. But the point of this article is not me banging on how amazing my life is, I just want to show you this is possible for you too and inspire you.

Few years ago, I was trying to become an accountant. I struggled with the exams and did not enjoy the job or the studying. I kept failing my exams and struggled a lot. I decided its time for change and I pushed towards what I loved.

Today, I have successfully finished a course in Interior Design course at The Interior Design Institute with a pass rate of 95,6%. It felt like playing rather than an exam. However doing a course online does not compare to attending a live classroom at Northbrook College, where you meet people and doing the actual “doing”. Instead of learning the colour wheel you actually get to paint it. Nothing replaces the actual experience in the live classroom, where you can laugh, meet new people and get brilliant support when needed by the tutor. Given the opportunity again I would go directly for the Northbrook College and skip the online course.

I have designed private and commercial properties prior to the course and I feel very lucky to be doing the job I love. However this course just gives you the start up point, you need to get hands on.

Self-belief has a huge impact on you and your future and once I changed my beliefs and took the leap my life has changed. You too can achieve your dreams just believe in yourself and go for it!
